| Description:        | Building Prevention Capacity through Culturally Anchored Resilience Against Substance Use Disorders (CARAS) addresses the sharp rise in substance abuse as well as opioid and stimulant overdoses among Nevada’s Hispanics and other ethnic groups. This disturbing trend, especially with fentanyl, underscores the urgent need for specialized intervention programs tailored to Hispanic adolescents facing substance misuse and acculturation stressors. CARAS integrates evidence-based practice programs, focusing on strengthening familial bonds and reducing acculturation stress, adapting its strategies to the cultural dynamics of Southern Nevada’s Hispanic youth. The initiative also includes a robust marketing campaign to enhance community awareness of the risks associated with Marijuana, Opioids, and alcohol misuse Key objectives of CARAS are: 1. Enhancing Family Communication: Implementing our program to improve intra-family dialogue and support, essential for youths navigating cultural integration. 2. Increasing Awareness and Education: A culturally resonant marketing campaign will inform the community about how acculturation impacts substance use, emphasizing prevention and available support resources. 3. Building Community Capacity: Training educators, healthcare providers, and community leaders to effectively support at-risk youth with proactive preventative strategies. The expected outcomes of CARAS are centered on reducing substance use risk factors among participants, which will be measured using the SAMHSA GPRA |

Additional specific metrics related to substance abuse issues will be collected and analyzed by a third-party group to gauge the program's effectiveness in reducing opiate and stimulant use and enhancing community competence in managing acculturation stress. Ultimately, CARAS aims to foster a supportive environment that mitigates risk factors while promoting protective factors against substance use disorders among Hispanic and other ethnic youth. |
